VOL. 5. NO. 41 MONESSEN, PA., SATURDAY, AUGUST 11, 1906. SIX CENTS THE WEEK

WILL HELP POOR CRIPPLE

Paper Started to Raise Money to Aid Crippled Newsboy.

Carl Hantame a fifteen year old boy who has been selling Saturday Evening Posts in Monessen the past year or two has aroused sympathy on the part of our most substantial citizens and an effort is being put forth to aid the the lad and start him on the right road to make a useful man. At present he is hobbling about with a peg leg, having been a victim of a railroad accident sometime ago which necessitated the amputation of one limb. He is experiencing great difficulty in getting about and is at present helping to support his mother and other members of the family by the few pennies he earns selling papers.

The boy's present condition has aroused a sympathic cord in the hearts of some of our people who believe in home mission work and consequently Officer Watts was started out with a paper asking for popular subscription to raise money enough to buy the lad a substantial cork leg and all who can are asked to contribute. A local physician has offered to take a special interest in the case without cost.

Jacques Brothers

(Who performed at the Star Theatre this week.)

No little excitement was created at the Star theatre last night, when the time was called for G. C Jacques to perform his mysterious feat, that of escaping from a dry goods box nailed shut. Joe. Sefier, the clothier, tied the magician's hands securely behind his back, placed him in the box, nailed with twenty penny nails, the box being made of one inch thick material. It looked like a great bluff on the part of the clever artist when he stepped into the box.

The audience stood spell bound while the last nail was being driven and in exactly three and one half minutes, the man made his appearance and was vociferously applauded. This was one of the most clever performances of its kind ever produced in this city. Last night was the seventeenth time it has been tried and proved successful with the exception of once that the actor fainted while in the box. Tonight will close the engagement mystifying the trunk act, which has also been creating much comment.

A WRONG OPINION.

Not only in Westmoreland county are murders becoming so numerous, but in Allegheny Washington and othor counties as well, which would indicate that the blood-thirsty element is getting more numerous as time moves on. In commenting upon the murder of the Pearce family, the Cannonsburg Notes editorially commends the press of the country for advocating the obediance of our laws, no matter how heinous the crime. The press could not afford to advocate mob violence as a punishment for murder, but it could insist that our laws be so framed that a wretch who steeps his hands in human gore could be brought to a speedy trial and justice meted out to him before his crime is published broadcast and becomes the common gossip for everybody.

The Jeannette Dispatch this week in commenting upon the murder of the Peace family says: "The fourth victim of the nigger, Dempster, died last Sunday. This most outrageous crime has called forth varied comment. The cringing pusillanious sentimentalist utilizes the horror of the crime as a theme against lynching. Justice, the protection of virtue and home, the safety of women and every element of decency, cries out in tones of unmistakable and indignant protest, 'Burn the damned nigger.'"

In all the comment on this special case that has come to our observation, this is the worst revengeful utterance we have heard. The personal feeling against this wretched mortal got control of the writer's judgment and forced him to give to the world an opinion which is contrary to our laws and which is in strict violation of the principles of American citizenship and a barrier to civilization.

He should have attacked the laxity of the laws and laid his argument on a broader foundation than the one cowardly villian who committed the crime. To correct evils we should always begin at the root.

AN OLD GENIUS IN A YOUNG BODY

[Original.]

MacMicken had been a great actor. Indeed, he still was a great actor, but he was drawing near the end of his career. People were beginning to regard him as a bit old fashioned. He had retired from the stage several times and had lately returned, "positively for the last time," and was playing an engagement at the Standard. His friends were vainly trying to keep up his audiences for a few nights longer when the old man would go on for the last night of his engagement.

But when that last night came MacMicken did not come with it. He owned a handsome country place twenty miles from the city and used to come in on an express train that was due at 6 o'clock. On the night of his last performance he did not show up as usual on the arrival of the train. There was a local train that arrived at a quarter to 8. He might have taken that, but the manager was a bit nervous at his not coming on the express and notified me, his understudy, to be ready for the part in case anything had happened. He further suggested that since Mac and I were the same build I'd better make up to personate the star as well as the character, which was Hamlet. If Mac should come in late many might not notice that he had not been on from the first.

The hour for the play arrived, and every one who had long admired MacMicken assembled to give the old man a fine sendoff. The manager had telegraphed to find out what was the matter, but there was no one at Mac's place except the servants, who replied that he had started to walk to the depot much earlier than usual.

At 8 o'clock the orchestra started in and at a quarter after 8 the curtain went up. Hamlet is not on till the second scene, and up to the last minute it was hoped that Mac would appear. He did not. A few minutes before I was to go on I passed the manager, who hailed me with delight, thinking me to be the star. This indicated that I was well made up to represent MacMicken. I was received with a warm demonstration. I bowed—indeed, kept bowing for a long time—though I noticed that the noise was made mostly by a few of Mac's old friends. But I had no sooner got into my part than I discovered that I had secured unusual attention. I seemed buoyed by some inspiration by which I felt that I could not only take Mac's place, but take it in the days when he was as young as I. All the delicate shades of meaning to be found in that remarkable part, all the biting satire, the philosophic thought, seemed to come from me as a part of my nature. Before I went on for the second act I was told that the audience was wondering at Mac's rejuvenation, some of the older ones declaring he was doing work he had done thirty years before.

With every act the enthusiasm grew till at the close I held the audience spellbound. When the curtain fell there was a perfect storm of applause and I was called before it again and again till I consented to speak. Where the words I said came from I did not know. I had entered so far into Mac's identity that I seemed to speak for him and as he would have spoken.

"My friends," I said, "I am deeply touched by this kind reception. To night, an old man, I have offered a youthful body, that I might make you really feel a pleasure you would have feigned from sympathy. I thank you, and goodby."

"You mean a young man in an old body?" cried a voice.

I went off amid a storm of applause to be met by the manager, who came at me angrily:

"What did you want to give it away for by talking about an old man in a young body for?"

"I don't know," I replied, confused, "somehow I thought I was Mac."

Anxious to get away and be by myself, I went directly to my dressing room and shut the door. I was disrobing when it opened, and who should come in but MacMicken himself.

"I suppose you think you've done a remarkable thing," he said, dropping into a chair.

"Why didn't you come and do it yourself?"

"Because I wanted to try an experiment. I know that I'm not what I was thirty years ago. Now, I believe in many things that the world scoffs at. Do you remember how you felt tonight when you spoke the lines:

"There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy?"

"I felt that there were."

"I made up my mind to let you, a young man, take my part on my last night and try to inspire you with my own fervor when I was your age. I came in town by an early train and have been sitting in the gallery with a mask on my face. I concentrated all my will power to throw my Hamlet—my Hamlet of years agone—into you. I have succeeded beyond my wildest expectations."

"And shown me how to play Hamlet."

"You think so? Play Hamlet without the inspiration I put into you tonight and see what you will do."

I went to bed feeling uncomfortable, but the next morning was myself again and scoffed at Mac's claim that he had supplied the ability with which I had made such a success. I had no trouble the next season in getting the manager to put me on in Hamlet. I was well advertised as MacMicken's understudy and on the opening night had a good house. I made a bad failure. I tried again and again to play Hamlet, without success, and at last was obliged to give it up."

An Adventure of Lovers

[Original.]

Asa Emery, aged seventeen, and Charlotte Crapo, aged fifteen, were causing their respective parents some uneasiness. They were constant companions, and it was feared that companionship would ripen into love. Indeed it had ripened into love, though none but the young couple knew it.

One thing they were forbidden and that on the ground that Charlotte was but a schoolgirl. Asa wished to take her to places of amusement. That which was unattainable openly was undertaken by stealth. One evening they stole away and visited a theater together. When the play was over and they had started home it suddenly began to rain. Charlotte was frightened, and Asa was, to say the least, worried. By the story they had concocted they were supposed to pass the evening near Charlotte's house under cover. If she went home drenched the story must come out. Something must be done to prevent a wetting.

Standing before a house was a carriage, the driver apparently asleep on the box. No street lamp was near, and the location was quite in the dark. Asa put his fingers to his lips and, leaving Charlotte, tiptoed to it, cautiously opened the door and beckoned to her. She came, got into the carriage, and Asa followed, softly closing the door behind him. They were beyond the reach of a drop of rain.

The situation to the children—they were little more—was delightful. First, they were plucking forbidden fruit in being there at all; second, they were saving themselves from discovery by occupying a carriage in which they had no right. The rain pattered merrily, but no more merrily than they chuckled. But suddenly their satisfaction was changed to fright. The front door of the house before which the team stood opened. A man came out and, after a hasty glance up and down the street, came toward them. The window of the coach was down, and he threw in a bundle, which fell in Charlotte's lap. The man whispered something to the driver and away went horses, carriage, driver and children.

Their consternation was great. They did not dare call to the driver to stop, and they were in an agony as to where he would take them. The consequence was that they did what they had never done before—clasped each other tightly and waited as if they expected to be driven over a precipice. They were taken they knew not whither for half an hour; then the carriage stopped. It had hardly done so before a man, who must have been waiting for it, opened the door. Charlotte gave a bit of a shriek. The man, who had extended his hand apparently to grasp something, suddenly withdrew it with an exclamation and took to his heels. The driver jumped from the box and followed him at full speed.

Asa got out through the open door, followed by Charlotte, and they were about to hurry away when a bit of curiosity supposed to pertain especially to the softer sex stopped them.

"I wonder what's in the bundle," said Charlotte.

"Never mind."

"It may be something nice. Are you going to leave it?"

"Yes—no." He darted back, seized it and the two walked rapidly away.

Asa soon recognized the street they were on and knew that they were not far from Charlotte's home. The time which, if it accorded with their story, they were to have been at home, was passed, and they were at a loss what to do. After discussion they decided that Charlotte should go into the house openly and make a full confession. Her parents were waiting in much trepidation and before she went to bed she had made her confession, was forgiven, and, leaving the bundle with her father, went up to her room to sleep as tranquilly as if nothing had happened.

But the next morning at breakfast Charlotte ventured to ask timidly:

"Papa, what was in the bundle?"

"Paper, my dear; nothing but paper." And, taking his morning paper, he left the table.

After the episode Asa and Charlotte were left to follow their own sweet wills. No opposition was made to their going where they liked together, and, although this spoiled the fun, they had had one experience together which formed a strong bond of union. Besides, there was a mystery connected with it, for Asa told his sweetheart that the morning after it occurred her father had come to his father's house. A third gentleman was called by telephone, and the three held a long consultation. They had called Asa in and asked if he could identify the two persons connected with the mystery, which, of course, he could not, though he gave locations accurately.

Asa and Charlotte's love grew stronger as they grew older. Asa went into business, and when he got $20 a week salary he marched up to Mr. Crapo and asked for his daughter.

"Asa," said the old gentleman, "do you remember your carriage drive several years ago? Well, on that drive you captured $50,000 that had been stolen from a bank. The parcel thrown into the carriage contained the money. Charlotte gave it to me, and I took it to your father with the story. The president of the bank gave us the reward offered for the return of the money, and the location you gave led to the arrest of the thief. The rewards for both amounted to $15,000. You can have Charlotte, and the day you are married this money, with interest, in all $18,000, will be given to you and Charlotte, share and share alike."

So it was that the young couple started life very comfortably.

To cure an aching back.
The pains of rheumatism,
The tired-out feelings,
You must reach the spot—get at the cause.

In most cases 'tis the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys.

Charles Bierbach, stone contractor, living at 2625 Chestnut St., Erie, Pa., says: "For two years I had kidney trouble, and there was such a severe pain through my loins and limbs that I could not stoop or straighten up without great pain, had difficulty in getting about and was unable to rest at night, arising in the morning tired and worn out. The kidney secretions were irregular and deposited a heavy sediment. Doctors treated me for rheumatism, but failed to help me. I lost all confidence in medicine, but Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me so quickly and so thoroughly that I gladly made a statement to that effect for publication. This was in 1898, and during the six years which have elapsed I have never known Doan's Kidney Pills to fail."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Bierbach will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price, 50 cents per box.

THE BIG PIANO SALE GOES MERRILY ON.

Many Fine Pianos Being Sold Daily at W. F. Frederick's Special Sale 544 Donner Avenue, Monessen.

The weather does not appear to have any bad effect upon the special sale now being run by W. F. Frederick, 544 Donner avenue, Monessen.

Thursday evening people bought pianos while the storm raged. Among the purchasers yesterday were parties from Belle Vernon and Charleroi, which is proof that the great bargains are worth coming long distances to secure.

A prominent merchant yesterday remarked that he supposed that he would have to buy one and said that he had been promising his family a piano for a long time, but that he had never found the class of piano he wanted, at a satisfactory price. He selected a very pretty flemish oak case of a prominent make. His family will enjoy music on Sunday.

The special sale will only last a very few more days, and interested parties ought not lose a moment in looking this stock over.

Every piano is fully guaranteed by the manufacturers and also by the personal guarantee of W. F. Frederick.—

Why go without a piano when you can have one of the very best at about half regular price and have plenty of time in which to pay for it.

The store will be open this evening until 10 o'clock.

WEBSTER NOTES.

Wm. Conroy, of Monessen, was a business visitor in town yesterday.

Mrs. Frank McMahon and daughter Mary, of Monessen, are spending a few days in town at the home of Mr. McMahon's parents.

Miss Mame Bargehr returned home today after having spent the past week on her father's farm in the mountains near Uniontown. Mr. Bargehr will not return for some time.

The work on the school house is being held up on account of the difficulty the contractors are experiencing in obtaining a particular kind of joists which are to be used in the work. Several of the directors have expressed it as their opinion that the rooms will not be ready by the time school starts in September.

Although the oats, wheat, and hay crops are unusually good the farmers are unable to get them harvested owing to the heavy rains. If the wet weather continues the loss to the farmers will be heavy.

Knights Templar to Picnic.

McKean Commandery No. 80, Knights Templar, of Charleroi, will hold its second annual outing and basket picnic at Kildora park next Thursday. The exclusive privilege of the park has been secured for this day and all amusements will be free. All Masons and their families, excepting sons over 21 years of age, are privileged to attend.

Church Notes.

Bethany Baptist church—Morning subject, "The Evolution of a Christian Worker." Evening, "A Good Man's Journey and its Outcome."

St. Paul's Lutheran church—"Business Sagacity in Religion" is the morning subject, and Adonijah or Solomen;" for the evening.

Will Hold Festival

The Ladies Aid Society of Bethany Baptist church will hold a festival on the church building site, Schoonmaker avenue, near Sixth street, Saturday evening. Home made pastry, ice cream and other refreshments will be served. In case of rain, the festival will be held in the vacant store room of the opera house.

THE DIVINE NAME.

Ineffable Word That Is Never Used by Many Israelites.

An eminent rabbi has given his view of the ancient Jewish rendering of the name of the Deity. He says that the term "Jehovah," the ineffable tetragrammaton, is never pronounced by many Israelites. They use the word "Adonoi," which signifies "the Lord." The translators of the Bible followed this custom, rendering the word "Jehovah" as "Lord." In ancient times the Pharisees replaced the tetragrammaton by Shem. They used "Shemo," which is also Biblical, as the sacred name, and this name is yet retained to some extent among the Jews. But it would appear from passages in the Psalms that Adonoi, or Lord, for Jehovah, was more ancient even than the times of the Pharisees. It thus occurs eight times in Psalm lxxxiv. It also appears in the book of Exodus, where "Jehovah" had been used in the original Hebrew. This substitution would seem to be older than any other, and it is yet common among all Jews.

The rabbi says he has found that the ancient translations testify in favor of "Adofiol."

Looking at the English translation of the Old Testament, it will be found that the name Jehovah appears in the books of Genesis, Exodus, Judges, the Psalms and Isaiah. It is not in the New Testament.

NOTES AND COMMENT

The saddest words of tongue or pen
Are when you hear, "Lend me a ten."
But the words which bring a greater woe,
Are, "Pay me back the ten you owe."

The deer season has opened, says an exchange. It's dear season all the time in Monessen.

A local druggist has reported an exceptionally large sale of flea powder this week. Fantine and Tiger must be getting their annual cleansing.

A barnstorming "Uncle Tom's Cabin" troupe is headed this way to worry the nickles and dimes out of our pockets. We thought the weather was the limit, but it appears not.

When Officer Watts gets his bloodhounds, the first thing he should do is set them on the trail of those "fellers" who are "fernenst" the government and run 'em all out of town.

It is reported that the Jeannette skating rink has claimed a victim. Now we must put the rink on the card with the automobile, the trolley car and other deadly combinations.

"Fewer clothes the fashion now" says a headline in an exchange. Hikel Skidoo eld headline writer, don't you know that it's back to the uncut for the peek-a-boo. You're behind the times and don't know it.

The Monongahela Republican had a notion to say something a few days ago, but gave it up. Equal parts geography and history injected at the seat of the brain might relieve the editor. He has mushroom fever.

A Morgantown paper dreaming of the Indian summer weather says "The small boy with a bunch of matches is our greatest menace." Yes, probably so, but the summer girl with a bunch of matches is our greatest blessing, so she is.

Today is pay day at every mill in town and about $150,000 will be paid out in Monessen. Lookout for tomorrow, she'll be a day of celebration. Every "hunk" in town will jump outside of a jag and the police will have to do double duty. The merchants won't need an extra cashier Monday though. Never fear that.

Lester Piano $175.

Not new, but practically as good and $450 was paid for it not long ago—If you want a bargain. See it.

Charleroi Drops Two.

Charleroi lost a double leader to Uniontown yesterday both games going to the Fayette Countians by the score of 8 to 2.

Kummer started the first game for Charleroi but was relieved by Bechtel. McIlvaine twirled the second game and was touched up for twelve hits. Charleroi played an errorless game but was out classed.

Connellsville Eagle Suicides.

In the parlors of the Eagles's Club rooms S. R Mason, aged 43 years, for years a prominent business man of Connellsville, ended his life yesterdyy morning by sending a bullet into his brain.

In Mason's pockets were found several letters, dated August 10, addressed to Undertaker J. E. Sims his widow and his son Edward and representatives of five lodges. The letters said that financial trouble had driven him to suicide.
